LINCOLN AND GRANT STICK.

A resolution was introduced a few days ago to change the names of Lincoln and Grant counties to those of Lee and Davis.

The appears from our Charleston special this morning, that some stupid ass has been introducing a bill in the Benate to change the name of "Grant" county to change the name of "Grant" county to change the name of "Grant" county to "Washington." He was set down by a "Washington." He was set down by a session for forty-two minutes.

One of the resolutions adopted was that the Sergeant at arms get up a plat or map of Charleston, giving all the streets, &c., and the boarding houses of the delegates, so that "we will know where to find one another." It seems that the delegates are another." It seems that the delegates are sary expense to raise the United States

A stranger attending the Convention for the first few days would have thought people, guaranteeing to them life, liberty and the pursuit of such happiness as they may be inclined to run after.

The original mover of the resolution to have the flag hoisted over the old church where the Constitution is to be cut up, salted, smoked, dried and hung in canvas sack, is amazed at the up, and to-day raised his silvery voice over the voices of four other Delegates, who were all talking at once, and said that if he had thought the intro-duction of his resolution would have caused so much disturbance, he never would have introduced it—no, never never. The only question of interest up yesterday was the flag question, and that had nothing to do with the making of a constitution. Mr. Farnsworth offered a resolution directing the Sergeant-a-tarms to

Mr. Knight proposed that if any persons or members of the Convention desired to raise the flag, they could do so, as far as this Convention was concerned.

This enlivened the debate more than ever, some wanting to raise the flag at their own expense, and others not wanting them to be so self-sacrificing, when Mr. Ward came to the surface again, and realilized that he considered his first their state. reaffirmed that he considered his first duty and devotion to his State, and, then, what ever affection might be left over, s be lavished upon the United States. How long this discussion would have lasted it is impossible to tell had it not Comeys was identified by W. S. King, teller of the Pitt Banking Company at Pittsburgh, Pa., as the party who pre-sented a check for $2,400 at their bank legality of the requirement to have the bible read in the public schools was pending in the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio, and would, if possible be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, where, although Justice Strong, Chairman of this Court, and other Chris-tians were on the bench who were desix. ians were on the bench who were desir ous of giving the bible to children of the country, they would be obliged to decide the question according to the constitutionality of the law. In the Constitution of the United States, he said there was no clause recognizing religion or morality, and therefore the enemies of the bible had much to hope for when the question came before that court.
